2-year term faculty position

Position Description

The Department of Biostatistics at New York University School of Global Public Health is seeking applications for a non-tenure track Visiting Associate Professor faculty position to begin in Fall 2021. Candidates are expected to have: (1) a doctoral degree in an area related to Biostatistics, and (2) teaching experience in biostatistics.

The School of Global Public Health (GPH) offers academic degrees at the undergraduate, masters and doctoral levels. The undergraduate program includes 13 joint majors where students study public health along with other complementary subjects. The Department of Biostatistics offers MPH and MS degrees, and a PhD within the GPH PhD program in Public Health. Faculty in the department also participate in a school-wide, newly-launched DrPH degree. The Department is interested in recruiting an outstanding faculty member who can strengthen and contribute to our course offerings. We are strongly committed to promoting diversity and supporting students, staff and faculty from underrepresented backgrounds. Please see our website for more information: https://publichealth.nyu.edu/department/biostatistics

This position is contingent upon budgetary approval.
